Summary

Ethical standards: Especially the further developed western societies are claiming that science and medicine should serve all sick and suffering people as well as possible and according to the state of the - medical - art.

The MDMA in couples-therapy-study, or MICT-Study, shows clearly that this state of the art improves significantly, when PAS = Psycho-Active Substances like MDMA are applied in a safe, professional and well controlled way.

The MICT-Study was a prospective study, prepared since the end of the ninetenseventies and going until the mid-nineteeneighties.

The European part of the MICT-Study included around eighty couples; about fifty of these couples were from the German-speaking DACH-countries.

One half of these couples complained about various problems with sexual intimacy, although they were physically healthy.

The other half of the couples considered their intimacy sane, meaning that both partners enjoyed intimacy and both were able to reach an orgasm when they made love.

All couples who wanted to participate in the MICT-Study, underwent a strict selection process, including physical examination, ergometry and psychological tests, as well as personal interviews, alone and as a couple.

MICT - which also was called: the AEON-Study, or simply Project Infinity, accepted only completely healthy couples - physically and mentally - who wanted to improve/ heal their relationship and who also had had personal experiences with MDMA before, for instance in MDMA-group-therapy-sessions or in MDMA-assisted individual therapy-sessions.

When the setup for MICT was complete, all participating couples received a starting dose of 100-140 mg of pure S/ R-MDMA per person, plus a 30-70 mg booster of the same per person and a letter with instructions, by mail.

All couples did their MDMA-experience on a Saturday at home, with MDs on call, if necessary.

Side effects: About 12% of the couples reported some mild discomfort - low energy, somewhat tired - on Monday/ Tuesday or on Wednesday during the week after the MDMA-session; 2 couples made use of the offer of a - non-MDMA! - therapy session because of this. During the MICT-Study, no couple or individual showed significant craving or other signs of dependency towards MDMA or other PAS.

All couples reported, however, that the desired effects of the couples MDMA-experience: Re-gained empathy, communication and - often poly-orgiastic - intimacy outweighed the mild side-effects by far.

Results of the MICT-Study

In both the problem-intimacy = p-group and in the sane-intimacy = s-group, more than 80% of the women became orgiastic, mostly even poly-orgiastic during this study, which comprised of three MDMA-assisted experiences for all couples, each three months apart.

Those of the participating men, who were able to integrate passive anal sexuality into their intimacy, were also mostly able to reach a polyorgiastic experience (around 60-70%).

Long-term Effects

One couple - having quarrelled for years! - from the problem = p-group said: "A wise person advised us once to leave jealousy, envy and hatred behind, but so far, we had lots of difficulties with that - always fighting between us, in the family, at work - what have you....; but since our MICT-experiences, we are quite able to leave those negative attitudes behind!

Instead, we found a new spring for us as a couple, the mood in the family is much better, our bulimic daughter got well by herself, we both got better conditions in our jobs - and so on."

Over the duration of around one year, including the three MICT-experiences, over 90% of the - strictly preselected - participating couples reported similar improvements.

The re-evaluations after three, five and ten years - with around 72% of the original participants in the end - were also remarkable.

The MICT-Study with the three MDMA-sessions for the participating couples was still rated as at least: "One of the five most meaningful and transforming experiences of our lives" by more than 86% of the responding couples.

Consequences for our Present Time

Why are the results of the MICT-Study published only after over thirty years?

Because just now the time is finally ripe for it! The UN and the WHO appear quite entangled in their outdated suppressive policies, as could be seen at UNGASS from April 19-21, 2016 in New York; more information on UNGASS 2016: www.globalcommissionondrugs.org

And there are many, many people in the world, who are illicitly suppressed, accused, hunted, jailed and way too often even killed, because they are using healing PAS, like in the MICT-Study!

And these policies of paranoia, panic, propaganda, prohibition, and persecution will only change, if the people of all nations are informed about the true healing potential of most PAS, like in MICT-Study above.

But if there are enough informed people, they can elect politicians, who will finally end the 'prohibition' of healing PAS and make sure that these unique and irreplaceable medications get their due place in science and medicine again.

. . . . and for our Future!

And when all healing PAS - and their production, trading and selling - are Legalized, Regulated and Taxed = LRT by the national governments and professionally utilized in medicine and psychotherapy, we just might find more empathy, intimacy and communication in our national and international relations as well.

Why? Because a lot - most? - of the aggressive, possessive and destructive egotism in our present world has its roots in the deficient or dysfunctional empathy, self-confidence, intimacy and communication in the individual person and in the individual couple!

So, the more people and couples are healing their empathy and self-confidence, their loving intimacy and their free communication, the deeper the truth, tolerance and trust, which could be established in and between families and nations - and maybe even between the Family of Nations.

Therefore, many MICT-Studies should be done today!

Which could prove to be a direct and essential way to a concordant and peaceful future for humankind.
